B L M

The real B L M = Bureau of Land Management

This government agency was founded by Harry S. Truman , Dec. 10 1946 and the headquarters is in Washington D. C. There are branch offices throughout the USA and their job is to track and keep records of the uses of government lands, National Parks , etc.

What does this have to do with genealogy?

I have spent much time during this lockdown on the internet. The Bureau of Land Management has a very good web-site that is very interesting and easy to navigate. One can find out anything about the national park system, up to date newsletters , information on federal lands and historic photos from various parks.

The genealogy link is in the GLO (General Land Office). Families that bought land from the Federal Government in the 1800's were issued land patents. These were issued in the territories and States to attract settlers. The actual patents can be viewed on the website. The patents contain the name and signature of a buyer, a legal description , date of purchase or a military warrant in lieu (a benefit of serving during a war) . I actually found on my maternal side of the family a patent in Illinois for 160 acres bought with a military warrant for James Wheeler who was deceased and had served in the War of 1812. It states his only heirs were 7 brothers and sisters. They used the warrant to get land in Illinois and started farming after leaving New York. Each person was named, and the date lets me know when the families came, and each person had to sign so an actual autograph is a plus. Also once a surname is searched other land purchases might show up. I also looked up my husbands family name in Wisconsin and found the patent. Interestingly, that patent signature showed that James was a " junior" another genealogical piece.

Through the Bureau one can order a copy of the document as well.

Immigration Information

Before 1906 immigration was regulated by the state governments, after 1906 immigration was regulated by the Federal Government. Standardized forms were used and more details were requested. Some of the information you can find on these later immigration papers are birthplace, port and date of arrival, physical description, and names of wife and children, if applicable.

Keep in mind that, until 1922, women could not be naturalized on their own; they became a citizen when their immigrant husband did. So your female immigrant ancestor may not have any citizenship papers of her own.

Declaration of Intent

The first step is when the immigrant filed his "first papers." On this form, he declares his intention to become a citizen and renounces all allegiance to foreign government.

There was usually a residency requirement of several years, so the declaration of intent was followed by a waiting period.

Petition for Naturalization

After the residency requirement had been met, the immigrant could file the "second papers." This signified that the immigrant was ready to become a United States citizen.

Certificate of Citizenship

There's only one copy of the certificate and it was given to the new citizen. You will have to find this in home sources.

From a research standpoint the citizenship certificate does not give any helpful information, but holding the paper that proclaimed your ancestor "citizen" is nevertheless a thrill. The certificate included a photo after 1929.

WSGS 2020 Virtual Fall Seminar and Workshop

By Judy Rockwell

On Friday, October 16, Lori Bessler, Wisconsin State Library Archives, conducted a 4 hour virtual workshop titled Don't Leave Any Stones Unturned! Finding Collections Anywhere and Everywhere.

This is just a small sample from Lori's presentation.

"Don't make assumptions about the family!"

"Know the area and era!" Search maps and local history sources from the time and place they lived.

Make a plan, use timelines and research logs--Remember many records are not online

Check these sites often for new content-- Ancestry, Fold 3, FindAGrave, FamilySearch, Deathindexes.com, TheAncestorHunt.com, FindMyPast, MyHeritage, Deadfred.com

Lori and everyone at the Historical Society Library and Archives welcome your questions and are always ready to help.

Archives reference: 608-264-6460 ----email: askarchives@wisconsinhistory.org

On Saturday, October 17, Elizabeth Williams Gomoll, CG, professional genealogist from Minnesota, was speaker for the daylong virtual seminar. She operates Red Bird Genealogy Services www.redbirdgen.com . We had 4 hour long sessions with breaks between.

Session 1: Genealogy Smart Start, Things I Wish I'd Known. Elizabeth stressed organization. Start with what you know is correct and work from there. Research extended family, friends and neighbors. Be sure to always cite your sources. Use Cyndislist.com. Go in person to find records not online. Periodically review what you have.

Session 2: Where They Once Stood: Finding Your Immigrant Ancestor's Place of Origin. Start with the full name with spelling variations, at least the year of birth, names of family members, and any other information you already have. Work back from what you know. Look for family memorabilia and family stories, use online sources and repositories.

Session 3: Unlocking Notation Codes on Alien Passenger Lists. We learned the history of passenger lists and when information was required. Elizabeth provided a list of abbreviations for common codes as well as a list of special inquiry annotations-reasons for exclusion 1903-1924. Examples: QE—Quarantine, LD—loathsome disease CL—contract laborer

Session 4: I Got My DNA Results. Now What? Elizabeth discussed the 3 basic DNA tests and the 4 DNA testing companies. She talked about the concerns some people have about being tested and the accuracy of ethnicity. She suggests downloading your raw DNA and uploading it to other databases. Recheck the results often. Be specific when contacting matches and tell which company shows your match and who you match. Be sure to thank responders.

This is my 4th or 5th time attending the fall seminar and workshop, but the first time virtually. I thoroughly enjoyed it and learned a lot. I missed the interaction with other genealogists, but it was easy to do virtually and WSGS managed it well.

2021 Gene-A-Rama Conference is scheduled for April 9 and 10 in Manitowoc. I hope we can meet in person, but if not, attending virtually is a good substitute. I encourage everyone to attend either way!!
